

WISH I HAD KNOWN Business Program to Aid Harried Parents of Student-Athletes

WISH I HAD KNOWN is an online mastermind course to help parents of athletes navigate the complicated modern age of youth sports.

PHOENIX, AZ, UNITED STATES, October 23, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The rising cost of everything-- uniforms, equipment, club fees, gas to drive to games, tuitions, etc.—is dampening the joy parents should be experiencing with their elite athletes. Many challenges—drugs, mental illness, unanticipated physical injuries—are beyond the scope of most parents. A new virtual course--WISH I HAD KNOWN (WIHK)--has been designed where current and retired athletes, academics, community and business leaders and other parents share their experiences and recommendations.

With the changes, controversies, and confusion plaguing NCAA, Olympics and other sports, I felt students and parents need more access to objective information and advice.”

Currently, WBC is seeking to identify the first ten FOUNDING FAMILIES, representing various sports with student-athletes of various ages from around the country. These families will receive a heavily discounted cost for the program, and special attention and opportunities. They will also be helping evaluate and improve the program for the larger numbers of families that will be served in 2025.

“I ran a youth sports non-profit for 14 years and know the challenges athletes' parents face,” says Meridith. “With exclusive access to top industry professionals, this course provides parents with what I call the 3 Rs (i.e., essential References, Referrals, and Resources) that every parent needs to navigate the complex world of athletics, business, and career development. Don’t miss this opportunity to give your child the competitive edge he/she deserves!”
