This masterpiece symbolizes the nurturing bond between earth and water, vital for life's growth. Crafted from organic materials like luminous stones, cowry shells, and jute, it reflects the harmony between nature and culture. Each element tells a story: luminous stones signify the radiance of African identity; cowry shells embody womanhood and fertility; jute represents the strength and resilience of Zimbabwean women. Jasper's designs are not just attire; they are living expressions of Zimbabwe's musical heritage, intertwining rhythm and culture into each garment. The tail of "Marina Wevhu," adorned with natural seeds, transforms movement into music, echoing the vibrant spirit of his homeland.
