Made from the highest quality durable leather and with an adjustable strap to accommodate youth through adults, Absolutely Ridiculous sliding mitts have been lighting up Major League Baseball diamonds along with baseball gloves and protective elbow and shin guards. The Cincinnati Reds' Elly De La Cruz, New York Yankees Luke Weaver and Jazz Chisolm Jr., and Bryce Harper of the Philadelphia Phillies trust Absolutely Ridiculous to protect them on the field.

About Absolutely Ridiculous

Founded in 2021 by former athlete and award-winning artist "X," Nashville-based Absolutely Ridiculous Innovation for Athletes (ARiA) is a creative endeavor that reimagines sporting goods as functional art, collaborating with influential brands and individuals on innovative designs that break the mold of traditional sporting goods by blending elements of art, fashion, luxury, music, pop culture, and sports. The original Absolutely Ridiculous concept was a baseball glove designed to look like a melting ice cream cone, which sold out online in mere seconds. The company's product line has since grown to include an array of unique, game-ready baseball and softball gloves - all meticulously crafted using professional grade Kip leather - as well as sliding mitts, headwear, and leather care products, with new concepts released through a "sneaker culture" drop model that creates both a buzz and demand unmatched in the industry. Absolutely Ridiculous became one of the youngest brands ever to be featured in "MLB The Show" with the inclusion of several of its gloves and other items in the 2023 edition of the popular video game.

It's always Showtime with this sliding mitt.
