spay/neuter vouchers were provided to pet owners. The Nevada Humane Society was on-site to microchip 66 pets and issue 65 local dog licenses providing services to 99 pets.

In partnership with Carson Tahoe Health, free flu vaccinations were administered to pet owners to ensure the health of both pets and their families. Volunteers from the University of Nevada, Reno (UNR) contributed their time and energy, assisting with various tasks throughout the day and enhancing the clinic's impact on the community.

Additionally, Jamie Brianna's Legacy Fund provided financial support, and I am Boundless generously donated Pets & People dog treats, which were given to the pets. These treats, made by adults with disabilities, exemplify how partnerships benefit both people and pets, aligning with the core mission of providing holistic support to the community.

"We are honored to be a part of this event," said Jim Peckham, executive director of FISH. "These wellness clinics offer both pets and their owners critical care, ensuring the well-being of Carson City's most vulnerable populations."
