Nerve Repair and Regeneration Market Overview

The main drivers of the market are the leading players' robust product pipelines and the rise in neurological illnesses. Numerous technical developments have improved the effectiveness of treatment for neurological illnesses, which is also anticipated to fuel market expansion. The neurological activities of outpatient clinics were hampered by various government containment measures during the severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2) pandemic. Due to social restriction measures, vulnerable patients—such as those with Parkinson's disease (PD) or dystonic patients receiving deep brain stimulation (DBS)—were more likely to experience chronic stress, and their mental and motor symptoms were observed to worsen.

The report covers extensive competitive intelligence which includes the following data points:
