Formed in the early 1980s, B.F. Raid (Boston's Final Raid) made waves with their distinctive fusion of heavy metal, punk rock, and psychedelic influences. This unique blend of genres set them apart from other bands on the Boston scene and quickly earned them a devoted following.

Now based in New Hampshire, the band continues to build on their legacy, blending raw power and unpredictable creativity into their music.

B.F. Raid's intense live performances were instrumental in their rise to prominence, playing at Boston's top underground venues and Revere Beach's local bars. Their electrifying sets, defined by heavy riffs, relentless drumming, and a fierce stage presence, became known for their ability to captivate and energize audiences.

The band's signature mix of aggressive metal with rebellious punk energy and experimental psychedelic edge gave them a distinct sound that resonated with fans, making them one of the most dynamic acts to emerge from the region.

On Matt Connarton Unleashed, the band will dive deep into the inspiration behind their latest album, Raided Again, and share details on their plans for their next release. Fans and listeners will get an inside look into their creative process, the evolution of their sound, and what lies ahead for the band.
