Enhancing Vogel Alcove Redbird with Donor Recognition Signage

Vogel Alcove, an organization committed to helping homeless children and their families gain stability through early childhood education and supportive family services, recently expanded with the Vogel Alcove Redbird facility. This new site enables Vogel Alcove to extend its critical services to more families in need. The donor signage created by HAC & QAH not only beautifies the space but also plays a crucial role in recognizing the generosity of the donors who made the facility possible.

"Our team at HAC & QAH is honored to have been a part of this significant project, which allows us to contribute to Vogel Alcove's mission," said Sara Beth Joyner, President of HAC & QAH. "The donor signage is designed to reflect the heart and soul of what Vogel Alcove stands for, and we hope it inspires continued support for their remarkable work."

Mercedes Burton, Director of Design at HAC & QAH, commented, "Our goal was to design visual elements that not only recognize contributions but also integrate seamlessly with the welcoming environment Vogel Alcove is known for."

About the Donor Signage Project

The project was meticulously planned and executed to ensure that each piece of signage effectively communicates gratitude and recognition. The two large murals serve as focal points within the facility, celebrating major contributions, while the updatable donor wall offers flexibility to add new donors as Vogel Alcove's community of support grows. Additional signs throughout the facility maintain a consistent theme and aesthetic, reinforcing the importance of all contributions, big and small.
