

Translation Agency Founder Wins Prestigious Award for Promoting Women's Entrepreneurship

A translation agency founder has been recognised for her outstanding contribution to developing women's entrepreneurship in Central and Southeast Europe.

BUDVA, MONTENEGRO, October 30, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The "Creators for Centuries" award was offered to Vanja Keindl, founder and CEO of VERBA, at The World Congress of Entrepreneurs in Budva, Montenegro, last week.

Speaking about the award, she said: "I am deeply honoured to receive this recognition. It serves as a testament to our efforts at VERBA to foster growth, innovation, sustainability and setting high standards in global business practices."

"I hope this acknowledgement inspires others to follow their dreams and play an active role in developing their communities and sectors," she added.

The award shows Keindl's commitment to offering women opportunities in business and promoting innovation and excellence in the translation industry.

VERBA was founded by Keindl in 1998 in Croatia, and it soon branched out with a second office in Denmark. The translation agency currently employs 26 staff and works with more than 500 linguists around the globe to provide flawless communication in different languages.

Under Keindl's leadership, VERBA has grown to serve international clients across several industries, including healthcare, technology, marketing, law and IT.

For VERBA, quality is key, which is evidenced by its numerous certifications, including ISO standards.
