"As a Black woman, I was told to keep my head down to avoid being perceived as aggressive or a 'mad Black woman.' As a person with a disability, I was forced to fit in. This led to me (and so many like me) hiding my spark, my truth, my soul. The world wasn't built for people like me. I'm mad, and it drives me. I'm different, and it elevates me. It's time we celebrate that - our mad, our different." - Lachi

Mad Different is more than a series of performances; it's a community-driven cultural movement. Fans are invited to follow the creation of each performance and engage with the artists through TikTok, YouTube, and other social media platforms. The series fosters an inclusive dialogue by sparking conversations about identity and difference through dynamic social media engagement and partnerships. Using the hashtag #MadDifferent, fans can share their own stories of self-acceptance, creating a space where differences are celebrated, and everyone is encouraged to connect and contribute to this growing community.

The first single, Out of the Dark, has been officially released just in time for Halloween. This haunting, jazz-inspired track delves into themes of self-liberation and the journey of embracing one's authentic self, featuring Lachi alongside co-artist Medusa. Known for their avant-garde 'revenge-pop' style, Medusa combines thick beats, visceral melodies, and unapologetic storytelling to explore queer joy, pain, and defiance, empowering outcasts and promoting neurodiversity.

A true boundary-pusher, Medusa has performed for diverse audiences, from underground venues to major stages like NYC Pride and SXSW. Fans can experience Out of the Dark across platforms with a performance video and acoustic and fully-produced versions.
