Nada de Ti- Single

Reflecting on personal experiences, JoAmber’s new release “Nada de Ti”, due out October 31st, tells the story of staying with someone who mistreats you, holding onto the hope that things will improve. But as the lyrics unfold, the protagonist reaches the powerful realization of walking away from her relationship. "I've been in this situation more than once," JoAmber shares. "I stayed, hoping for change, but there always came a day when I woke up and said, 'No more. I used to jump from relationship to relationship, but it wasn't until I spent years by myself that I found true happiness. We must be at peace with ourselves before truly thriving in any relationship."

The music video, which will be released on November 6th perfectly complements the song’s inspiring theme of self-love, underscoring an important message: happiness starts from within. Rather than focusing on the pain of the past, the music in the video takes a refreshing and uplifting direction, shifting the narrative away from the ex-partner and highlighting the triumph of moving forward reflecting female empowerment and the will it takes to walk away from unhealthy love relationships. As JoAmber explains, "In the song, I talk about finding someone new who treats me better, but the twist in the video is that the 'new person' turns out to be me. I'm the one sending myself love and encouragement. I've learned that no one can care for me better than I can."
