The platform serves the Texas Hill Country wine region, which attracts over 2 million visitors annually, by providing direct access to elevated experiences that were previously difficult to discover and book in one place. Offerings range from champagne tours and private treehouse tastings to exclusive chef's dinners, helicopter wine tours, hands-on cooking classes, private barrel tastings and luxury glamping.

The platform's search functionality allows visitors to filter options based on location, preferences, and group size, catering to everything from intimate getaways to corporate retreats. A curated selection of experiences spans key wine destinations including Fredericksburg, Johnson City, Hye, Stonewall, Dripping Springs, Wimberley, and surrounding areas.

Plans are underway to include experiences for spa and wellness, craft breweries and distilleries to showcase the breadth of experiences available in the growing wine region. "Whether it's a girls' trip, romantic getaway, corporate retreat, or wedding celebration, our mission is to connect visitors with the perfect experiences in Texas Wine Country," Gibbs explained.

The Texas Hill Country has emerged as a significant wine tourism destination, with local wineries contributing substantially to the state's tourism economy. The new platform aims to further elevate the region's profile and support this growth by connecting visitors with local businesses and experiences.
