on the critical role of finance in supporting a just, equitable transition during a pivotal time in the fight against climate change.

As governments and leaders gather at COP29, this publication provides an essential resource for stakeholders committed to securing a sustainable and just future for all. Financing a Just Transition – Transforming Funding, Tackling Climate Change features in-depth analysis of how the world can better employ finance mechanisms to drive equitable outcomes, as well as on improving transparency, and enhancing integrity.

With a strong emphasis on cross-sector collaboration, it examines the pre-eminent challenges as well as providing practical solutions.

Other areas covered within the publication include how regenerative agriculture can make climate solutions more resilient, how corporations are acting on their climate targets and a new way that multilateral development banks could mobilise finance.

With introductions from John Kirton and Ella Kokotsis, both from the Global Governance Program, the publication also features insights from Achim Steiner, the administrator of the United Nations Development Programme; Ely Sandler, research fellow at Harvard University; and Tania Strauss, the head of food and water at the World Economic Forum.

Industry leaders have also joined in the discussion, providing insights on a range of topics. Deloitte's, Jennifer Steinmann and Bernhard Lorentz discuss how the world can unlock much-needed capital and accelerate a sustainable future. Meanwhile, the CEO of GE Vernova, Scott Strazik, outlines the company's equitable approach to electrifying and decarbonising the world.

Financing a Just Transition – Transforming Funding, Tackling Climate Change is an official publication of the Global Governance Project. The Global Governance Project is a joint initiative between GT Media Group, a London-based publishing company and the Global Governance Program based at the University of Toronto. Its editors include Ella Kokotsis the director of climate finance strategy for the G20 Research Group, and John Kirton, director of the Global Governance Program at the University of Toronto.
