out without sufficient assessment of the candidate's aptitude or whether they match the company culture, raising concerns over a decline in the quality and credibility of recruitment agents. Given this situation, a new framework is needed to ensure that recruitment referrals provide a high level of satisfaction for both companies and candidates.

The theme of the summit is "Agent Survival," reconsidering the value of recruitment agents in the age of generative AI and the role they play in the growth of Japanese companies. Through its participation in the summit, alt will offer insight on how generative AI can pave the way for the future of recruitment agents. We'll also aim to create an opportunity to increase the value of the recruitment agent market, leveraging our unique position as a leader in the generative AI industry.

In addition, a new project called "alt Agent Team" will be announced at this summit. This project is an industry-first attempt to pay agents 500,000 to 1 million yen per month plus stock options. The first generation of members of the alt agent team will be selected from the agents who participate on the day of the summit, and we look forward to creating new value together with them.

With the rise of generative AI, every industry and sector is expected to enter a period of upheaval, and HR agents in particular will need to have solid skills and vision. Based on already-released case studies of generative AI use in the HR field, alt will support each individual living in the "Agent Warring States Period." Please join us for this valuable opportunity to discover the future of the HR industry and the opportunity to increase market value. We recommend applying early as spots are limited.
