Ventures, Inc. (CapTech), an award-winning technology consulting firm, announced today a strategic partnership with Alloy, the identity risk management platform behind over 600 of the world's leading banks, credit unions, and fintechs. This collaboration leverages Alloy's scalable technology platform to enhance CapTech's offerings and delivery of innovative solutions in the financial services industry.

Alloy's expertise in identity risk management complements our commitment to providing secure and innovative solutions. This partnership allows us to enhance our offerings and help our clients.”

Andy Sofish, CapTech CEO

“We are thrilled to embark on this partnership with Alloy,” said CapTech CEO Andy Sofish. “Alloy's expertise in identity risk management complements our commitment to providing secure and innovative solutions. This partnership allows us to enhance our offerings and help our clients improve their customer journeys.”

This partnership will give CapTech's financial services clients access to Alloy's comprehensive identity risk management solution alongside CapTech's integration expertise, providing them with enhanced security, streamlined customer onboarding, and improved fraud prevention capabilities. Together, CapTech and Alloy aim to help banks, credit unions, and fintechs deliver a seamless and secure digital customer experience by ensuring that Alloy's fraud and compliance solutions are properly integrated into financial institutions' existing workflows, core systems, and customer management tools.

“This partnership is an important tool for financial institutions looking for a seamless, innovative way to better prevent fraud,” said Keith Kettell, Chief Revenue Officer at Alloy. “CapTech's deep understanding of technology and innovation, alongside Alloy's extensive expertise in helping financial institutions manage their fraud, credit, and compliance risk will allow more banks, credit unions, and fintechs to grow with confidence.”
