The ribbon-cutting ceremony gathered notable business leaders, culinary influencers, and passionate food lovers under the newly revamped Tom Lee Park pavilion, with the Memphis skyline serving as a backdrop. Headlining performances from acclaimed acts like The Red Sample Band and Urban Trivia Live added to the festival’s national appeal, while top food brands, including crowd-favorite Slutty Vegan, presented a dynamic array of flavors, offering a festival experience that merged entertainment, food, and community connection.

“The BFF Cookout Festival is a monumental achievement for Memphis and beyond, showcasing what’s possible when business and culture intersect. We’re proud to support Black Foodie Finder’s mission and look forward to what’s next,” said a representative from the Greater Memphis Chamber of Commerce.

From its inception, Black Foodie Finder has aimed to connect communities with unique food experiences. The BFF Cookout Festival is a manifestation of this vision, creating opportunities for small businesses, national food brands, and influencers to engage in meaningful connections. With plans to expand the BFF Cookout Festival to other major cities, Black Foodie Finder is poised to become a leading national force, bridging culinary artistry and corporate opportunity.
