What Is Driving the Growth of the Herbal Supplements Market?

The growing geriatric population is anticipated to drive the expansion of the herbal supplement market in the future. This demographic includes older adults, generally defined as those aged 65 and above. Older individuals frequently turn to herbal supplements to address a range of health concerns, seeking potential relief from age-related issues or as a complement to conventional treatments. However, caution is recommended due to possible interactions with medications and the variability in efficacy.
