proudly announces its four-year anniversary, marking a remarkable journey from inception during the height of the COVID-19 pandemic to becoming a premier destination for sports enthusiasts. As a free, over-the-air network, ALL SPORTS has quickly grown to redefine accessible sports content, bridging the gap for viewers eager to experience a wide range of traditional and non-traditional sports.

All Sports Television Network launched with a mission to bring diverse, globally-sourced sports programs to audiences across the U.S. Originally focused on acquired sports content from around the world, the network has expanded its capabilities significantly over the past four years. Today, ALL SPORTS not only broadcasts live events but also offers an array of original programming that connects deeply with fans. Additionally, the network recently introduced its own sports news department, providing comprehensive coverage and insights that keep viewers informed about the latest events happening across the sports landscape.

“We’re thrilled to celebrate this milestone and to reflect on how far All Sports has come since its founding during a challenging period for the industry and for audiences,” stated Roger Neal Smith, President of All Sports Television Network. “Our commitment to offering free, high-quality sports content has only strengthened as we continue to innovate and expand our programming to meet the evolving needs of our viewers.”

Looking ahead, ALL SPORTS is committed to further expanding its programming, audience reach, and partnerships to bring viewers unparalleled access to a rich array of sports content. Through live broadcasts, unique original shows, and timely sports news, the network aims to continue making an impact in communities across the nation.
