Time Messenger by F. Jay Falone

This civilization, unknown to most, holds the key to the future of the human race, as their survival will determine humanity's fate in 2007. Only a select few—President Truman, Professor Einstein, and Air Force Colonel Jenks—understand the high-stakes mission that could alter history forever. Together, they must undertake a covert journey across time to rescue the Tarsi from extinction, ensuring their role as humanity's allies against an intergalactic menace.

Falone masterfully blends science fiction with elements of adventure and suspense, capturing readers with a storyline packed with time travel, secret missions, and vivid world-building. The narrative follows Colonel Jenks, scientists Dominic Costa and Maria D'Luce, and Einstein himself as they unravel the mysteries surrounding the Tarsi civilization, all while racing against time to prevent an asteroid from obliterating Tarsi City.

With a background in weaving stories that combine science and fantasy, F. Jay Falone offers readers an escape into a universe of intrigue, resilience, and the threads that connect past and future. Currently residing in Massachusetts with his wife, Christine, and their two children, Mekala and Nicholas, Falone brings a family-centered perspective to his storytelling.
