Tara Winn, Dexian COO, has been named to SIA's Global Power 150 Women in Staffing list for the third time.

MCLEAN, VA, UNITED STATES,
November 13, 2024 /

EINPresswire.com/ -- Dexian, a leading provider of staffing, IT, and workforce solutions, today announced that Tara Winn, the company's Chief Operating Officer, has been selected for the 2024

Staffing Industry Analysts (SIA) list of Global Power 150 Women in Staffing. In its tenth year, the list recognizes women for their exceptional contributions in the staffing industry. This is the third time that Winn has been recognized with this honor.

Tara is one of the key leaders at our company. Under her direction, we have been able to simplify & streamline our organization creating a stable, sustainable foundation for our continued evolution.”

Maruf Ahmed, Dexian CEO

Under Winn's leadership as COO, Dexian implemented a new operating model focused on client-centric service. This new model included an overhaul of financial reporting and IT systems ensuring cross-functional synergy that helped drive the company forward.

"I am so glad that Tara has been recognized by SIA again for her influence and leadership in our industry," said Maruf Ahmed, Dexian CEO. "She is one of the key leaders at our company. Under her direction and insight, we have been able to simplify and streamline our organization creating a stable, sustainable foundation for our continued growth and evolution."

Ahmed also explained that her career within the Dexian organization showcases the company's focus on the learning and development of its employees.

Winn's SIA recognition reflects her remarkable journey within Dexian, where she has served since 2009. Starting in recruiting, she transitioned to corporate roles in 2015, rapidly advancing from Director to Executive Director (2017), Vice President (2019), Chief of Staff (2023), and ultimately Chief Operating Officer (2024). During her tenure, her leadership and contributions have been pivotal to the unification of the firms that led to Dexian. Winn spearheaded the business and cultural integration programs and her ability to manage the operational complexities of mergers and acquisitions led to diversification and consistent growth.
