Timeshare ownership can be a wonderful experience, but circumstances change and there comes a time when EVERY owner has to look into ending their ownership"

Brian Rogers, Owner of Timeshare Users Group

Group \(TUG\), The most trusted resource for timeshare owners for over 30 years and the very first timeshare website on the internet, has partnered with the timeshare industry site ResponsibleExit to publish an essential new article, "How to Exit a Timeshare If a Developer Cannot Take Back Your Product." This comprehensive guide provides valuable insights for owners seeking practical solutions to end their ownership when developer buyback programs are not an option.

The guide outlines clear, actionable pathways for owners who want to exit an unwanted timeshare but find themselves unable to surrender their ownership back and become overwhelmed by the virtual sea of misinformation and aggressive marketing from third-party entities that promise easy and guaranteed exit solutions for an exorbitant upfront fees thus putting owners at risk of losing even more money while receiving little to no help at all.

Key topics covered include legitimate resale outlets, how to utilize and negotiate with resort or developer-backed surrender programs, and the critical differences between reputable options and extremely high-risk third-party exit services. Timeshare owners need to understand the reality of the secondary market and how misinformation can lead to very costly mistakes. The goal is to provide owners with the cold, hard and often ugly truth about the options available to them for disposing of an unwanted timeshare.

This guide is particularly timely as increasing numbers of owners face challenges in the secondary market or working directly with developers especially with annual maintenance fees coming due for next year. By offering trusted, actionable resources, ResponsibleExit and TUG aim to help owners filter through the noise by explaining all their options thus allowing owners to make educated and informed decisions to hopefully avoid wasting more money on their unwanted timeshare.
