

Former Journalist Traces 40-Year Romance in Compelling New Book

LAS VEGAS, NV, UNITED STATES, November 14, 2024

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Wendy Green loves her husband — and almost never hates him — even after their decades-long marriage with as many hairpin turns as the Twisted Sisters roads that wind through Texas Hill Country. She and Charles had met on a wintry day at a North Dallas gym. Charles feels instant surges of chemistry. Wendy needs a bit more convincing. But their attraction grows and deepens, and within a year they marry. Little do they know what awaits them.

In his new, bittersweet romance, Love and Betrayal: The Secrets We Keep, author Dann Darwin delivers an intimate exploration of a relatable couple as life takes them from Texas to North Dakota and to Nevada throughout their 40-year relationship. Charles, a newspaper reporter, and Wendy, a watercolor artist, grapple with powerful currents of love, hate, lust and betrayal, often pulling friends and lovers into their complicated lives.

Did they even have a plan? Wendy wonders at one point. Or did they do what every young couple does: fall in love, get married and just hope everything works out OK?

Far from typical pulp fiction romances, Love and Betrayal depicts imperfect, relatable characters who make mistakes — lots of them, in fact — while navigating the inherent uncertainty of modern-day relationships.

Ultimately, Wendy and Charles move one final time and experience the climax of their decades-long, bittersweet love. If only they had known on their wedding day almost 40 years ago. If only they had known.
