MUNICH, GERMANY, November 20, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Creolytix,

the provider of end-to-end operational resilience solutions, today announced a collaboration with Dataminr, one of the world's leading AI companies, to deliver a revolutionary event detection platform to Siemens AG. As the key technology partner, Creolytix will collaborate with Dataminr to help Siemens — a pioneer in redefining the role of global corporate security — detect events, risks, and critical information in real time.

With the goal of amplifying its security capabilities, Siemens is setting a new direction in the industry — one that focuses on the power of community and collaboration . By combining the world-class expertise of Creolytix' innovative and comprehensive managed security platform and Dataminr's real-time, AI-driven event detection platform, Siemens is now set to elevate its risk management capabilities, ensuring greater operational resilience and insights in an ever-changing threat environment.

“This partnership is more than just a technological collaboration; it's about forging a future-driven ecosystem that brings together the best minds and the most cutting-edge tools,” said Marco Mille, Chief Security Officer at Siemens AG. “By cooperating with Creolytix and Dataminr, we are not only enhancing our security posture but also changing the game in how we approach security risk management. Together, we will drive innovation and shape the future of security for Siemens and beyond.”

As Siemens Corporate Security embarks on this new journey, this partnership reflects the company's commitment to staying ahead of threats by embracing groundbreaking solutions that empower its security teams to make faster, more informed decisions. By harnessing the power of advanced technologies and fostering a collaborative ecosystem, Siemens is leading the way in transforming corporate security for the future.
