As part of their winter preparation services, Fresh Air Duct Cleaning offers a range of solutions to improve indoor air quality and reduce potential hazards. Air ducts, for example, can accumulate dust, pollen, dander, and other allergens over time, negatively impacting the air quality within homes. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has highlighted that indoor air can be significantly more polluted than outdoor air, and Fresh Air Duct Cleaning recommends having air ducts cleaned every two to three years to combat this issue. For homes with pets or residents who suffer from respiratory conditions, more frequent cleanings are advised.

Dryer vent cleaning is another essential service offered by Fresh Air Duct Cleaning. Lint build-up in dryer vents can increase the risk of fire, making regular cleaning crucial for home safety. By removing accumulated lint, the company helps reduce fire hazards while also improving dryer efficiency, which can save both time and energy.
