The Bedfordshire Warlock

Patrick R. Field, former educator now turned novelist, embarks on an enthralling journey into the mystical and unknown with his new supernatural thriller “The Bedfordshire Warlock”. This gripping novel reveals Field’s passion for blending historical intrigue with supernatural suspense, as he weaves a tale that bridges past and present in a story of power, destiny, and love.

In “The Bedfordshire Warlock”, readers meet Elias Doever, a 17th-century man condemned as a warlock in Bedfordshire, Massachusetts, in 1692, and executed in a well of holy water. Three hundred years later, Dorian Leeves—a young man with uncanny abilities—encounters Beladon, an ancient force linked to Elias. Guided by Beladon, Dorian learns he shares Doever’s powers and must reunite the “three bloods” of Elias, Beladon, and himself to achieve an ascension that could grant him unimaginable abilities. However, his relationship with Toby Blessing complicates his journey, forcing Dorian to decide whether to pursue his supernatural destiny or embrace a life grounded in love.

With a Ph.D. and a distinguished 25-year academic career, Patrick R. Field blends scientific insight with supernatural themes, drawing readers into the interplay between science and mysticism. His storytelling captivates with rich historical detail, psychological depth, and suspense. Field's journey into fiction began with "Prince Patrick", a memoir that honored his mother during her battle with cancer, an experience that stirred his creativity and sparked his passion for writing. His latest novel, "The Bedfordshire Warlock", continues this journey, inviting readers into realms beyond the ordinary.

In her powerful memoir, "From Shattered Innocence to Radiant Healing: A Journey of Transformation Through Forgiveness and Compassion", Celeinne Ysunza, PhD, shares her harrowing journey from childhood trauma to profound healing.

Born prematurely to a schizophrenic, violently alcoholic mother, Ysunza suffered physical, emotional, and sexual abuse in various foster homes, finding solace in vivid dreams and otherworldly experiences. Adopted at sixteen into a loving family, she faced new challenges as a young mother, spiraling into a psychospiritual crisis. Her turning point came when she met therapist Bob Hoffman, who guided her through the transformative process of "lovingly divorcing" herself from toxic parental relationships. Through compassionate forgiveness, Ysunza confronted her past anger and fear, ultimately embracing a life of self-love, compassion, and spiritual growth—a testament to the healing power of forgiveness.

A lifelong seeker of truth, Celeinne Ysunza, PhD, spent over fifty years studying metaphysical philosophy, Eastern Thought, and Western Mystery Schools. Her spiritual journey led to a
