Calcifediol is a form of vitamin D, which is produced in the liver. Calcifediol offers multiple benefits to the human body, which include increasing the concentration of hydroxycholecalciferol. Calcifediol supplements are a form of vitamin D, which is better absorbed by the intestine. Calcifediol is majorly suited for use by individuals suffering from vitamin D deficiency. Calcifediol supplement is also used to treat various other diseases, like hyperparathyroidism in adult patients, and chronic kidney diseases.

The increasing global cases of vitamin D deficiencies and chronic kidney diseases are expected to propel the demand for calcifediol supplements during the forecasted timeline. The calcifediol supplement consists of vitamin D3 analog, which helps in treating secondary hyperparathyroidism of the chronic kidney disease stage 3 and 4. The global cases of chronic kidney diseases witnessed a significant increase over the past few years. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention of the USA in its 'Chronic Kidney Disease' report stated that in the nation, the cases of CKD are most common in individuals above 65 years, with about 34%, followed by 12% in individuals between the age of 45 and 64 years, and 6% in an individual between 18 and 44 years. Calcifediol supplements are also easily absorbed by the intestines of the body, which further helps in treating the deficiency of vitamin D in individuals.

With the increasing global demand for calcifediol supplements across the globe, various global companies and pharmaceutical leaders have introduced key products and solutions for the market. For instance, Immunotec, a global leader in the wellness and healthcare market, in October 2024, launched SunRay, a Vitamin D supplement, that features rapid-acting Calcifediol.
