In addition to her YA series, Lyall is currently working on an adult historical fantasy series, "No Place for Decent Women", set in early 20th-century England.

This new project continues her exploration of gender inequality, showcasing her versatility as a writer and her commitment to addressing important social issues through fiction.

Lyall's recognition in Reader's House and the Editor's Choice Award of Excellence highlight her growing influence in the literary community. Her journey, both personal and professional, serves as an inspiration to aspiring writers and readers alike, proving that resilience, imagination, and a passion for storytelling can break barriers and create lasting impact.

Here are some quotes from the interview.

"As an author, my goal is to inspire readers to dream bigger and believe in the magic within themselves."

"The beauty of storytelling lies in its power to connect people across time, space, and reality."

"I write to challenge perceptions, spark curiosity, and remind readers that anything is possible."

"Books are more than stories; they are bridges to understanding, empathy, and adventure."
