"Small Things Like These" is award-winning author Claire Keegan's landmark novel, a tale of one man's courage and a remarkable portrait of love and family. The international bestseller centers on Bill Furlong, a coal merchant in the 1980's, who uncovers disturbing secrets in a small Irish town that's controlled by the church. "Small Things Like These" won the Orwell Prize and was shortlisted for the Booker Prize. The book was recently adapted into a major motion picture starring Cillian Murphy and named one of the "New York Times" 100 Best Books of the 21st Century.

Troy Juliar, Chief Content Officer for RBmedia said, "Claire Keegan's 'Small Things Like These' is a deeply affecting story that will resonate with its readers...lingering in minds long after they've finished. Although a short story, this work has no shortage of content to inspire thought-provoking discussions among book club participants. Oprah's Book Club will reacquaint readers with this story of hope, quiet heroism, and empathy, and we're privileged that our audio edition will enable participants to listen and experience the story in an immersive way. And with the new movie adaptation, not only do people get to experience this moving story on audio, but they can also see it brought to life on the big screen."

Since the book club launched in 1996, Oprah has hand-selected the more than 100 recommendations, ranging from classic novels by Dickens and obscure titles from emerging authors to popular new bestsellers and book prize winners. Oprah's Book Club influences titles across all demographics and generations, a phenomenon known as "The Oprah Effect," propelling authors and titles to both critical and commercial acclaim.
