This book is designed for trumpet players of all skill levels, offering seven key rules to conquer sight reading with confidence and precision.

A Masterclass-Inspired Journey

Wayne's journey began in 1984 when he attended a master class led by the legendary David Hickman at the St. Louis Conservatory of Music. During this class, Hickman emphasized the importance of sight reading and introduced a game-changing technique: keeping your eyes one measure ahead of the music. This revelation transformed Wayne's approach to practice and set the foundation for his career.

After his time at Juilliard (1986-1991), Wayne went on to build a successful freelance career, subbing for Broadway musicals, recording for TV ads, and working on major motion pictures. His success in sight reading became the backbone of his career, allowing him to confidently tackle any piece of music put in front of him.

Seven Essential Rules to Master Sight Reading

In Mastering Sight Reading for Trumpet, Wayne outlines the seven critical steps for mastering sight reading:

Time Signature: Know the beats to guide your rhythm.

Key Signature: Familiarize yourself with sharps and flats for accuracy.

Articulations: Pay attention to staccatos, legatos, slurs, and accents.

Dynamics: Ensure the volume changes match the emotion of the piece.

Tempo: Select a tempo that accommodates the fastest notes without slowing down.

Don't Stop for Mistakes: Power through the etude without revisiting errors.

Stay Ahead: Always keep your eyes one measure ahead of where you're playing.
