How are Alzheimer's Disease and Dementia Influencing the Adult Day Care Market?

One crucial growth driver of the adult day care market is the increasing number of Alzheimer's patients. Alzheimer's disease is a progressive neurological disorder leading to memory loss, cognitive decline, and the eventual inability to perform daily activities. A combination of biological processes, such as the build-up of amyloid plaques and tau tangles, genetic tendencies, inflammatory responses, and other elements contribute to the progressive neuron loss and cognitive dysfunction experienced by Alzheimer's patients.
