

ZuCot Gallery Owners Recognized in Atlanta Magazine's 'Atlanta 500' for 2025

ATLANTA, GA, UNITED STATES, December 6, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- ZuCot Gallery is proud to announce that its owners, Onaje Henderson, Troy Taylor, and Omari Henderson, have been honored in Atlanta Magazine's esteemed 2025's Atlanta 500. This annual publication highlights the city's 500 most influential leaders across business, civic, and cultural sectors, acknowledging individuals who drive innovation and shape public policy.

Located in the historic Castleberry Hill district of downtown Atlanta, ZuCot Gallery stands as the largest African American-owned fine art gallery in the Southeast. Spanning 3,500 square feet, the gallery offers an eclectic décor and showcases works from some of the most prolific contemporary artists of our time. Its mission is to promote original works by living African American artists, providing both novice and seasoned collectors with meaningful and unique services that enhance the art collecting experience.

Over the years, ZuCot Gallery has featured esteemed artists of African descent, including Master South African artist Dr. Esther Mahlangu, Aaron Henderson, Charly Palmer, and Georgette Baker, among many other local, regional, and global talents. The gallery's commitment to elevating African American art and culture has solidified its reputation as a cornerstone of Atlanta's vibrant art scene.

The inclusion of Onaje Henderson, Troy Taylor, and Omari Henderson in 2025's Atlanta 500 underscores their dedication to fostering cultural enrichment and their significant contributions to the arts community. Their leadership at ZuCot Gallery continues to inspire and influence the appreciation of African American art both locally and beyond. The annual edition will be available in January 2025.
