How Does the Growth in Construction and Infrastructure Development Drive the Market?

The growth in construction and infrastructure development is expected to propel the growth of the head protection equipment market going forward. Construction and infrastructure development refer to the processes involved in planning, designing, building, and maintaining physical structures and essential facilities such as buildings, roads, bridges, and utilities that support societal functions and economic growth. Construction and infrastructure development are rising due to increasing urbanization, economic growth, and the need for improved public and private facilities to support expanding populations and economic activities. Head protection equipment is required to safeguard workers from head injuries caused by falling objects, impacts, and electrical hazards, ensuring their safety and compliance with occupational safety regulations. For instance, in November 2023, according to the Office for National Statistics, a UK-based non-ministerial department, annual new construction orders surged by 11.4% in 2022 compared to 2021, marking a historic peak of $102.86 billion £80.837 billion. The total output for new construction work rose by 15.8% in 2022, achieving a record high of $169,211 million £132,989 million. Therefore, the growth in construction and infrastructure development drives the head protection equipment market.
