Undermining the U.S. Constitution by Diane S. Vann

Readers' Favorite honors outstanding independent authors across various genres, giving visibility to works from small and self-published authors. Through this platform, Vann's 188-page political nonfiction book joins a respected lineage of powerful voices advocating for freedom of thought and intellectual exploration.

In "Undermining the U.S. Constitution: How the Communist Manifesto of 1848 Blueprints the Actions of the Democratic Party", Vann—a registered nurse with decades of experience in patient care—draws a striking parallel between her healthcare work and what she describes as a "national health crisis" of Marxist ideology.

Through structured analysis, she examines elements of the Communist Manifesto, contrasts them with the principles of the U.S. Constitution, and invites readers to recognize ideological shifts within America.

With her healthcare background, Vann presents readers with what she views as the “symptoms, diagnosis, and treatment” needed to address this ideological threat. Her approach challenges readers to consider the preservation of American values amid shifting social and political dynamics.

Diane S. Vann, RN, holds a B.S.N. from the University of Nebraska Medical Center and an M.S.N. from the University of Tennessee. Her commitment to public health now extends to political awareness, underscoring the need for vigilance in safeguarding America’s democratic foundation.
