

Tru Mission K9s Tackles South Carolina's Pet Overpopulation Crisis with Behavior Rehabilitation Programs

Tru Mission K9s, has launched an innovative Behavior Rehabilitation Program to address South Carolina's pressing dog overpopulation crisis.

LORIS, SC, UNITED STATES, December 11, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- South Carolina's pet shelters face a mounting overpopulation crisis, with many dogs being overlooked for adoption or returning due to behavioral challenges.

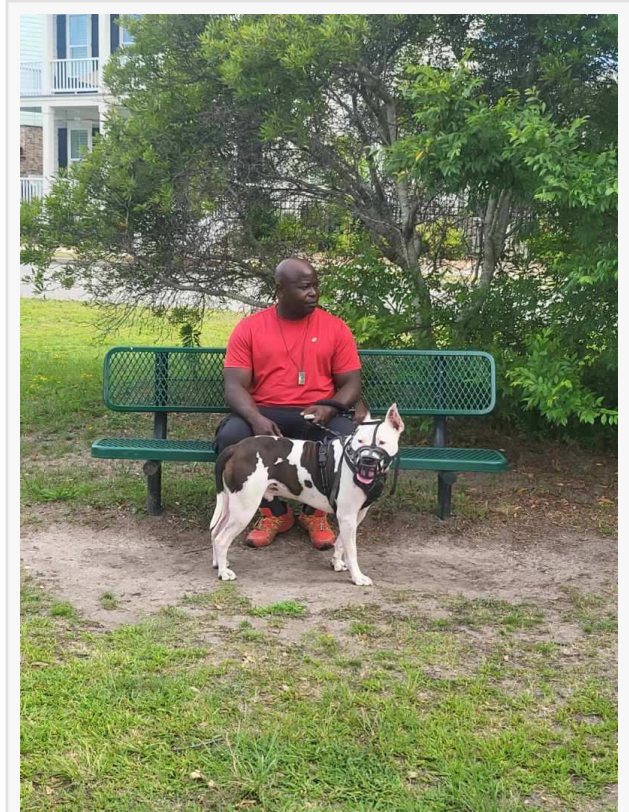

Tru Mission K9s, led by experienced canine trainer Don White, is addressing this issue with a year of savings for both the shelters and adoptive families, with numerous innovative Behavior Rehabilitation Programs designed to give rescue dogs a second chance at life.

This comprehensive program works directly with shelters and adopters to rehabilitate dogs, building their confidence and preparing them for success in new homes. To make this service more accessible, Tru Mission K9s is offering:

A 20% discount for shelters on board and train services or training assistance, helping dogs become more adoptable. Use the hashtag #Shelters25 to take advantage of this opportunity at checkout.

A 15% discount for adopters on all training services, ensuring rescued dogs can easily adjust to their forever homes. Use the hashtag #Rescue25 to claim this discount at checkout.

"Our goal is simple: to give these dogs the time and space to build confidence, to learn, and to thrive," says Don White, owner of Tru Mission K9s. "Rescue dogs need the right environment and training to succeed, and we're committed to helping them form unbreakable bonds in their forever homes.”

The program has already made a significant impact, with a decades-long history of helping dogs adjust to their permanent homes after training. By addressing common behavioral issues like anxiety, leash reactivity, and fear-based aggression, the program instills hope and ensures that rescued dogs are set up for success, giving them a brighter future.

Tru Mission K9s is more than just a dog training organization—it’s a family. Don White leads the team alongside his eldest son, Josiah White, and younger sons, Jay and Joel White.

Also part of the core team is trusted trainer Will Bennett. Together, they work tirelessly to transform the lives of rescue dogs and their adopters, embodying the strong family values at the heart of Tru Mission K9s.
