In sports, the maintenance of high-quality playing surfaces is a critical aspect to ensure optimal sporting performance, safety, and durability for both games and practices. This has substantially contributed to driving the commercial turf market growth. Participation in sports activities shows a rising trend due to the increasing awareness of health benefits, improved access to sporting facilities, and a growing emphasis on fitness and well-being society-wide. For instance, the US-based Sports and Fitness Industry Association SFIA published a report in February 2024 revealing that 78.8% of Americans, equivalent to 242 million people, participated in at least one sports activity in 2023, marking 2.2% increase from 2022.
