Anderson County Economic Development

The award was presented to Alex Vitou, Plant Manager at the Dodge Belton facility, during the DCAC Manufacturing Alliance Meeting held at Anderson University on December 6.

The DCAC, a public-private partnership dedicated to fostering economic growth and industrial development in the region, recognized the Dodge Belton facility for its continued investment in local manufacturing and workforce development initiatives.

"Being recognized by the DCAC is a testament to our commitment to Anderson County and the surrounding communities," said Alex Vitou. "We believe a strong partnership between manufacturers and local communities creates sustainable economic growth. Our success is directly tied to the success of our community, and we're dedicated to creating opportunities for our workforce while contributing to the region's manufacturing excellence."

The DCAC Manufacturing Alliance brings together industry leaders, economic development officials, and educational institutions to strengthen the manufacturing sector in Anderson County.

Our success is directly tied to the success of our community, and we're dedicated to creating opportunities for our workforce while contributing to the region's manufacturing excellence."

Alex Vitou, Plant Manager

Through this collaborative network, the organization works to attract new industries, support existing manufacturers, and develop workforce training programs that align with industry needs.

The Dodge Belton facility manufactures standard-duty industrial gearing solutions, which include Tigear®-2 and Quantis® gearboxes, and has provided the community with a safe working environment for decades—recently celebrating 25 years without a lost time accident.

As a cornerstone of Anderson County's manufacturing landscape, Dodge contributes to the region's economic vitality through job creation, manufacturing and technological innovation, and community engagement.
