"We are thrilled to have Patricia Davis join our advisory board," said Sortworthy CEO. "Her extensive knowledge and experience in the textile industry will be instrumental in guiding our company towards even more sustainable practices. We are confident that her contributions will help us achieve our goal of creating a more environmentally friendly future."

Sortworthy's partnership with Davis is a testament to their dedication to sustainability and their commitment to making a positive impact on the environment. With her expertise and guidance, Sortworthy is poised to continue making strides in the recycling industry and setting an example for other companies to follow. Their use of cutting-edge technology for textile shredding, fiber to fiber recycling and the creation of insulation materials is transforming waste into valuable resources.

Sortworthy's innovative approach to textile recycling, combined with Davis' wealth of experience, is a promising development for the future of sustainable solutions for textile waste management. The company looks forward to the positive impact this partnership will have on the environment and the industry as a whole.
