“We wanted to create a space where children could have fun, learn, and explore at their own pace,” said Jason Stadlander and Katerina Krumova, Co-Founders of Sandmagination.

“I've always had a passion for science,” said Katerina. “To me, it's crucial that kids get introduced to science early—and in a way that's exciting and fun. By turning science into play, I hope to spark the same love for discovery in the next generation that I felt as a kid. Let's make learning an adventure!”

In addition to open play, Sandmagination will offer birthday party packages, memberships, and special events for local families. The grand opening is scheduled for April, 2025, and families are encouraged to follow Sandmagination on social media for updates.

“As parents ourselves, we know how important it is to have a safe, engaging space where kids can just be kids,” said Jason.
