passionate aesthetic injectors committed to elevating their craft, the academy offers an unparalleled approach to mastering the delicate art of facial balancing, empowering professionals to help their patients feel emotionally connected to their reflection at any age.

Founded by “The French NP” herself, Sandy Hunt, AGACNP-C, is a Nurse Practitioner and advocate for the pro-aging movement who blends advanced medical training with artistic techniques. Hunt's philosophy celebrates aging not as something to be feared but as a journey of empowerment, beauty, and connection. Raised between

Los Angeles and the French Riviera, Hunt was immersed in two contrasting philosophies on life and beauty, ultimately leading her to embrace the French ideal of aging gracefully. “In French culture, life can truly begin after 50,” Hunt says. “There's mystery, seduction, and a connection to oneself that only grows stronger with age.”

The French Academy's weekend workshops are intentionally designed for small, curated groups of just four participants. This exclusivity ensures personalized mentorship, tailored curricula, and meaningful learning experiences. Each weekend is unique, reflecting the needs of the cohort, offering an unparalleled experience for medical aesthetic professionals.

At the heart of the academy is a hands-on approach to learning. Unlike traditional programs that rely solely on observation, trainees at l'Académie work directly with live models, gaining invaluable practical experience under close supervision. The experience is further enhanced by the Portfolio Review, a hallmark of the program, where participants receive in-depth critiques on their work. Modeled after fine art curriculums, this process helps injectors refine their techniques, address real-world challenges, and deepen their understanding of facial balancing as both a science and an art.

The program emphasizes the importance of mastering a full range of tools to achieve the best results. The academy goes beyond needles, equipping trainees with skills in cannulas, PDO threads, and advanced skin health protocols. This multi-modality approach ensures participants gain the expertise needed to craft subtle, natural results that honor the unique features of every patient, regardless of age or cultural background.

Hunt's journey into aesthetics is deeply personal. Originally an Emergency Room and Trauma Nurse who transitioned into Hospice care, she found a stark shift in mindset as people age, often becoming 'disconnected' from who they once were. Magnified by her own skin issues, she discovered tools for healing through aesthetics and regenerative medicine. This experience shaped her approach to patient care, focusing on creating harmony between the inner and outer self. "Aging gracefully is about balance—balance in our thinking, our 'joie de vivre,' and our intentions," Hunt explains. "The world doesn't need you to be 20 again; it needs you to love the way you feel about where you are now."

Hunt credits her mother and grandmother as the inspirations behind her philosophy. Her mother, Grace, embodies the elegance, strength, and optimism that have shaped Hunt's vision of beauty. Meanwhile, her grandmother, Anna, a steadfast presence during Hunt's childhood, taught her the power of resilience and joy. "Their examples remind me that beauty is so much more than physical—it's emotional, it's optimistic, and it's deeply personal," Hunt reflects.

Trainees of l'Académie receive one-on-one mentorship sessions that include business strategy and dream mapping, helping them refine their professional goals and integrate them into their practice.

From its intimate workshops to its transformative mentorship, The French Academy of Advanced Aesthetics empowers injectors to elevate their craft while embracing the timeless artistry of aging gracefully. Whether you are new to aesthetics or a seasoned professional, l'Académie offers a transformative experience that goes far beyond technical skill, instilling a profound understanding of how to create meaningful beauty that transcends time and trends.
