"We have been assisting navy veterans who have developed mesothelioma or lung cancer for nearly two decades and most were exposed to asbestos on a ship or submarine as a member of a repair crew, as a plumber, electrician, welder, or they were assigned to a ship's-submarine's engine room-repair shop. The other way a navy veteran might have had exposure to asbestos is they were assigned to a shipyard where they were required to work side by side with shipyard workers making repairs to their ship, or submarine. The typical navy veteran who will develop mesothelioma or lung cancer is about 70 years old.
