

Leading Through Resistance: Dr. Daryl D. Green's Insights for 2025's Challenges

Dr. Daryl D. Green, an acclaimed thought leader and strategist, shares actionable insights on how leaders can navigate resistance and disruption in 2025.

KNOXVILLE, TN, UNITED STATES, January 6, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In a world defined by disruption and change, renowned strategist, award-winning author, and leadership expert Dr. Daryl D. Green delivers timely guidance for leaders navigating opposition in 2025. Drawing on decades of experience in strategic leadership and organizational transformation, Dr. Green empowers leaders to face resistance with confidence and adaptability.

At the ACBSP Leadership Symposium in Chicago, Dr. Green showcased his expertise alongside Dr. Tracy Harrell Dunn, Dean of Benedict College's School of Business, in their presentation, "Moving from Faculty to Chair/Dean: Navigating Leadership Transitions in Business Education." Pivoting from his role as Dean of Langston University's School of Business, Dr. Green shared his firsthand experiences leading academic institutions through change. "Resistance is a natural part of leadership," Dr. Green explained.

"The challenge lies in using it as a catalyst for progress rather than a barrier to success."

Dr. Green's thought leadership stems from a distinguished career spanning the Department of Energy, academia, and global consultancy. His research and insights have been featured in USA Today, Ebony Magazine, and the Associated Press. With a focus on bridging gaps between strategy and execution, Dr. Green provides actionable solutions for overcoming organizational inertia and resistance.

2025: Leadership at a Crossroads

Dr. Daryl D. Green and Dr. Tracy Harrell Dunn, Dean of Benedict College's School of Business, team up to share insights on dealing with opposition in today's organizations.

The years following the pandemic have underscored the critical need for agile leadership:

- Increased Disruption: Automation and AI are set to displace 23% more jobs by 2025, according to the World Economic Forum.
- Employee Disconnection: Over half of workers surveyed by Deloitte in 2024 expressed a lack of alignment with their organization's vision.
- Leadership Challenges: Gartner projects a 60% higher failure rate for change initiatives where resistance is ignored.

These shifts demand leaders who can balance strategic vision with empathetic engagement, a hallmark of Dr. Green's approach.

Dr. Green's Leadership Playbook for 2025

Dr. Green recommends six practical strategies for leaders facing resistance:

1. Define Your Vision: Establish clear, inspiring goals to align your team.
2. Analyze Industry Trends: Stay ahead of disruptions through environmental scanning.
3. Leverage Core Competencies: Build on your organization's unique strengths.
4. Engage Stakeholders: Actively listen to employees, customers, and partners.
5. Use Resistance as Feedback: Opposition can reveal blind spots and opportunities.
6. Weigh the Costs of Inaction: Consider the long-term risks of avoiding change.

Citing Pascal Finette's Disrupt Disruptions, Dr. Green emphasizes, "When markets shift, so must leaders. Resistance isn't a roadblock—it's a signal to adapt."
