Tien-Yang Chen's Melody of Happiness stands out for its masterful use of color, light, and curved elements to create a lively and cozy atmosphere in a compact 59.5 square meter space. The design team strategically employed light tones, such as pinkish paint and beige curtains, to soften the ambiance and emphasize spaciousness. Curved cladding and faux titanium panels were used to eliminate the oppressive feel of a large beam spanning the social and private areas, while long strips of faux titanium-plated metal panels flow like ribbons, reflecting a subtle sheen for an elegant yet stylish look.

The Iron A' Design Award recognition for Melody of Happiness serves as a motivator for Tien-Yang Chen and their team to continue pursuing excellence and innovation in future projects. This acknowledgment may inspire further exploration of design techniques that prioritize the well-being and comfort of retirement home residents, potentially influencing industry standards and practices. By showcasing the successful integration of aesthetics, functionality, and accessibility in a compact space, Melody of Happiness sets a compelling example for designers tackling similar challenges.

Melody of Happiness was designed by Tien-Yang Chen, Jo-Chiao Chen, and the talented team at Dengfeng Interior Design. Their collaborative efforts and expertise in interior design, space planning, and material selection were instrumental in bringing this award-winning project to life.
