period. European and North American countries such as France, Denmark, Norway, Spain, the UK, and the U.S. have made concrete plans for the decarbonization of air travel at the domestic level. These plans have allowed them to explore several alternatives such as all-electric aircraft and airships. Nations across the globe are actively developing a comprehensive regulatory infrastructure for the safe operations of airships. Such initiatives are anticipated to make trade, transactions, and operations of airships much smoother and more efficient, supporting global business opportunities.

Based on architecture, the rigid segment held the highest share in 2021, accounting for nearly two-fifths of the global airships market, and is expected to continue its leadership status during the forecast period. However, the non-rigid segment is expected to register the highest CAGR of 7.0% from 2022 to 2031.

Based on application, the tourism and recreational segment accounted for the highest share in 2021, contributing to nearly one-thirds of the global airships market, and is expected to maintain its lead in terms of revenue during the forecast period. In addition, the same segment is expected to manifest the highest CAGR of 7.2% from 2022 to 2031.

Based on class, the medium segment accounted for the highest share in 2021, holding nearly half of the global airships market, and is expected to continue its leadership status during the forecast period. However, the small segment is estimated to grow at the highest CAGR of 7.2% during the forecast period.
