

From Chaos to Stability: How NexGen Taxes Is Helping Bench.Co Clients Rebuild

The sudden collapse of Bench.Co has left businesses scrambling, but NexGen Taxes steps in with proven expertise to restore stability and confidence.

SHERIDAN, WY, UNITED STATES, January 8, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The sudden and unexpected closure of Bench.Co, once a trusted name in online bookkeeping services, had left thousands of small and mid-sized businesses scrambling to manage their finances. With year-end deadlines looming, the abrupt shutdown created chaos and uncertainty for businesses across industries.

While the newly formed company, Employer.com has taken over Bench.Co's operations, the transition has raised more concerns about reliability, given its limited track record and lack of expertise. Businesses burnt by Bench.Co's sudden abrupt closure are looking for proven expertise and stability to navigate these challenging times.

"The word on the street is that Bench.Co was selling Accounting and Bookkeeping services but couldn't keep its own books in order and had to close out. Now, it has been bought by Employer.Com that was established just a few days before with focus on 'Recruitment' services, how safe are the clients who are still sticking with Bench.Co" said Nik Gupta, Senior Vice President of Strategy at NexGen Taxes.

This is where companies like NexGen Taxes, a well-established platform connecting businesses to certified and experienced bookkeepers and accountants, comes in. Per Gupta, Bench.Co's debacle has resulted in a huge boost of traffic as Bench.Co's customers to learn a lesson and avoid this already bad situation to become even worse.

For years, start-ups and small businesses have been leaning to go companies like Bench.Co who have their own proprietary application and blindly trusting them with their books and data. If they could off load one more chose to some provider that would help them focus on running their business, they were ready to try it. However, in the aftermath of this chaos, companies are reassessing their decision and going back to service providers such as NexGen Taxes that provide platform-agnostic services using standard apps such as Quickbooks etc so that if need be businesses can take over their books and don't get crippled like Bench.Co's collapse did.
