The Heidari Law Group recommends that homeowners take the following steps when dealing with insurance after a fire disaster strikes:

1. Document the damage: Take photos and videos of the damage to your property before any cleanup or repairs are done. This will serve as evidence for your insurance claim.
2. Review your insurance policy: Familiarize yourself with your insurance policy and understand what is covered and what is not. If you have any questions, don't hesitate to reach out to your insurance company or a legal professional.

3. Keep track of expenses: Keep a record of all expenses related to the fire, including temporary housing, food, and other necessities. These can be included in your insurance claim.

4. Seek legal advice: If you are facing difficulties with your insurance company, it may be beneficial to seek legal advice from a reputable law firm like the Heidari Law Group. They have a team of experienced fire damage lawyers who can help you navigate the complex insurance process and ensure that you receive fair compensation for your losses.

5. Be cautious with Insurance adjusters: Remember the insurance company's adjuster works for them, not you. If their offer seems too low or if they are denying your claim, this is a red flag.

It's hard to imagine the horror of learning your home has burned to the ground. And that's just the beginning of what can be a yearslong process recovering from the California wildfires" states Heidari. "We are already working with numerous families who have lost everything, fighting with the insurance companies to give them the full value of their property. Insurance companies are not your friend" says Heidari. Insurance officials say the claims process goes through a succession of stages, from the initial dislocation to debris removal, a bidding process and, ultimately, reconstruction.

"There are decisions you need to make right now, and things that need to happen in the days and weeks ahead," said Sam Ryan Heidari. If you're feeling overwhelmed, unsure of your rights or facing unfair treatment from your insurer, you need legal representation on your side to fight for you. As an experienced attorney in fire claims and homeowners insurance disputes, I can help" says Heidari.
