Businesses affected by the wildfires are facing disrupted operations, lost revenue, and the daunting task of rebuilding. To help alleviate some of these burdens, UCC Networks is offering a limited number of seats for VoIP services to ensure businesses can stay connected with customers, employees, and support networks.

"Communication is a lifeline during emergencies. Whether it's coordinating efforts, reaching out for assistance, or simply staying in touch, our goal is to make sure no business feels isolated during this critical period," the statement continued.

UCC Networks is inspired by the resilience and solidarity shown by the Los Angeles community in the face of adversity. This offering is part of their ongoing commitment to supporting local businesses and contributing to the recovery process.
