

Adaptive Reader Raises Pre-Seed Round to Expand Accessible Reading Solutions for All Learners

Adaptive Reader, an edtech platform revolutionizing reading accessibility, is proud to announce the close of its oversubscribed pre-seed funding round.

CAMBRIDGE, MA, UNITED STATES, January 15, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Adaptive Reader, an edtech platform revolutionizing reading accessibility, is proud to announce the successful close of its oversubscribed pre-seed funding round. The round, supported by leading education investors and institutions, underscores the company's mission to dismantle literacy barriers for diverse learners.

Ethan Pierce, Founder of Adaptive Reader, holding a custom-printed edition of Frankenstein created using Adaptive Reader's platform.

"Our goal is to make education truly inclusive by removing barriers to reading," said Ethan Pierce, CEO and Founder of Adaptive Reader. "This funding will allow us to expand our platform's capabilities and accelerate our work with publishers to ensure their content is accessible to all learners, regardless of language, reading level, or format preferences."

The funding round also reflects confidence in Adaptive Reader's unique approach to combining print-first solutions with cutting-edge AI technology. "Adaptive Reader's platform is transformative," said Scott Kinney, former CEO of Discovery Education. "By bridging the gap between accessibility and scalability, they are setting a new standard for inclusive education."

Powered by Education Leaders and Investors

Adaptive Reader's funding round was led by Updraft Education Group, with additional investments from Transcend Fund and WJG Investments. These investors bring decades of experience in education technology and publishing, ensuring strategic insights to drive our mission forward. Notable investors include:
