

Sylo Announces Educational Partnership with eDiscovery Today

Sylo & eDiscovery Today to educate industry professionals on technology & best practices to safely harness the power of language models throughout litigation.

HOUSTON, TX, UNITED STATES, January 14, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Sylo, the litigation platform for the AI era, announced today an educational partnership with Doug Austin's eDiscovery Today blog, the only daily blog for electronic discovery, information governance, cybersecurity, data privacy and artificial intelligence trends, best practices and case law.

The partnership enables Sylo and eDiscovery Today to work together to educate industry professionals on technology and best practices to safely harness the power of language models throughout the litigation life cycle.

We're excited to partner with eDiscovery Today to educate professionals about how AI-enhanced approaches are solving long-standing problems in eDiscovery & best practices for using these new tools.”

Jeffrey Chivers, CEO of Sylo

“Litigation teams are adopting AI-enhanced approaches to eDiscovery at a rapid rate,” said Jeffrey Chivers, CEO of Sylo. “We're excited to partner with eDiscovery Today to assist in educating professionals about how this new technology is solving long-standing problems in eDiscovery and best practices for using these new tools.”

“The emergence of generative AI and language models is beginning to revolutionize how eDiscovery and litigation is conducted and promises to shatter existing industry paradigms on best practices based on legacy technologies” said Doug Austin, Editor of eDiscovery Today. “I'm excited to work with the Sylo team to educate industry professionals on how to establish new best practices to fully leverage the power of these transformative technologies!”
