Ocular melanoma Overview

Ocular melanoma, also known as uveal melanoma, is a rare and aggressive form of cancer that originates in the melanocytes (pigment-producing cells) of the eye, typically within the uvea, which includes the iris, ciliary body, and choroid. It is the most common primary malignant eye tumor in adults. Ocular melanoma can cause symptoms such as vision changes, flashes of light, or dark spots in the visual field, but often, it is asymptomatic in the early stages. The condition can metastasize to other parts of the body, particularly the liver, and requires prompt diagnosis and treatment, which may include surgery, radiation therapy, or targeted therapies.
