

HMP Global’s Education group, two employees earn national honors for individual, program excellence

Awards from national organizations spotlight contributions by HMP Education and its employees toward excellence in education throughout the healthcare spectrum.

MALVERN, PA, UNITED STATES, January 21, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- HMP Education, part of HMP Global and a leading provider of healthcare education, earned a 2024 Best Practice in Live Activity Educational Design Award from the National Association of Medical Education Companies (NAMEC), and two team members received individual honors for outstanding contributions to the Continuing Medical Education (CME) field.

With a focus on practical, hands-on learning experiences, HMP Education provides healthcare professionals with the tools and knowledge needed to stay at the forefront of their fields.

The Best Practice in Live Activity Educational Design Award, presented during the annual conference of the Alliance for Continuing Education in the Health Professions (ACEhp), honored

Our employees consistently strive to make a meaningful impact on healthcare education across the globe.”

Randy Robbin, Chief Education Officer

HMP Education for its groundbreaking program, Tardive Dyskinesia (TD) 360 Learning Lab: An Innovative Self-Directed, Expert-Driven, and Hands-On Reinforced Learning Experience, which was developed in conjunction with HMP Global’s Psych Congress event portfolio. The prestigious award also celebrates HMP Education’s dedication to improving healthcare outcomes through innovative, high-impact educational programming.

NAMEC is a professional association dedicated to providing representation, advocacy and education for its members in the continuing healthcare education field.

HMP Education is a leader in developing high-impact continuing educational programs aimed at improving healthcare outcomes. With a focus on practical, hands-on learning experiences, HMP Education provides healthcare professionals with the tools and knowledge needed to stay at the forefront of their fields. Their award-winning programs, including TD360, showcase their dedication to advancing healthcare education.

"We are incredibly proud to have received the Best Practice in Live Activity Educational Design Award from NAMEC, a testament to HMP Education's commitment to excellence in healthcare education," said Randy Robbin, Chief Education Officer for HMP Global. "The TD360 program exemplifies our dedication to creating impactful, hands-on learning experiences that truly enhance patient care outcomes."

Individual Awards

The recognition comes as two of HMP Education's employees have earned individual accolades for their contributions to the continuing medical education (CME) community.

Jessica Epps, CHCP, Associate Vice President, Educational Strategy, has been named to the Alliance's CPD Forty Under 40 list, which highlights outstanding young Continuing Professional Development professionals. This award underscores her exceptional contributions to advancing education for healthcare professionals and her role in inspiring and engaging the next generation of leaders in the Alliance for Continuing Medical Education in the Health Professions community.

Andrea Zimmerman, EdD, CHCP, Senior Director of Accreditation & Compliance, received the Distinguished Member Award from the Alliance for Continuing Medical Education in the Health Professions for her unwavering commitment to advancing the goals of the Alliance, promoting the impact of continuing education across healthcare settings, and actively participating in the organization's initiatives.

The Alliance is a membership community of 1,000+ healthcare continuing education professionals dedicated to accelerating excellence in healthcare performance through quality education, innovation, advocacy and collaboration. The honors presented January 8 at the Alliance's 2025 Annual Conference in Orlando, Florida, highlight the leadership and passion that drive HMP Education forward, Robbin said.

"These honors not only reflect their individual excellence but also the collective spirit of our team," he said. "Our employees consistently strive to make a meaningful impact on healthcare education across the globe."
