“Gargoyle Systems is breaking new ground by creating an unprecedented data layer for drone activity, providing security and actionable insights for industries ranging from real estate to national security,” said Valerie Christopherson, CEO and Founder of GRC. “We’re excited to help amplify their vision and showcase how they’re addressing critical challenges in airspace management and safety.”

At the heart of Gargoyle Systems' mission is the creation of a global drone detection network—an advanced real-time data layer capturing drone activity between 100 and 400 feet. By leveraging AI-driven technology and scalable hardware, this network provides essential insights to industries such as security, logistics, and asset management. From mitigating aerial threats to delivering valuable data for commercial and industrial applications, Gargoyle Systems empowers stakeholders with the tools to secure assets and optimize operations.

“This partnership with GRC is a significant step forward in our mission to secure the skies,” said Mike Fraietta, CEO of Gargoyle Systems. “As we continue to expand our drone detection network and elevate airspace security, we need a partner that understands the nuances of this technology and can effectively communicate its value. GRC’s expertise in tech-driven industries has already delivered impactful results, including national media coverage within our first week together.”

GRC's proven track record in driving awareness for disruptive technologies positions them as the perfect partner to support Gargoyle Systems in scaling its vision. Together, they aim to redefine how industries approach airspace security and data-driven decision-making. For more information about GRC, visit www.globalresultspr.com.
